“ Jadene, I am so terribly sorry. I thought the world of both of you girls. Extremely intelligent young ladies and let's not forget how kind you both were when I was fortunate to teach you. God be with you and your family. Roxanne is at peace.

“ It is with a very deep sadness that I learned of Roxanne's passing. She was truly one of the beautiful people, inside and out. I met Roxanne when we were colleagues at Midway University; our offices were adjacent to one another and we spent many hours sharing and encouraging one another when we weren't in class. Roxanne was one of those professors who gave much more than they ever received back; she was constantly meeting with her struggling math students to give them extra instruction and help, no matter how long it took. I know many students who would never had met their math requirement had Roxanne not worked tirelessly with them in the wee hours. I was always eager to recommend her courses to my advisees, confident they would benefit from her wisdom and kindness. A dedicated Christian, she was a Godsend to me especially, and I knew she was one of the few who understood my life philosophy and purpose. I grieved with her over the many losses in our lives during that period, including the devastation the loss of a beloved pet brings. She loved animals as much as she loved her students, and her students reciprocated by giving her a pet when one of hers had died. It was the best thing anyone had ever done for her, she said. A woman of incredible intelligence and education, she was not appreciated as she should have been by those who know, but she leaves behind a crowd of grateful students and colleagues whose lives she touched more than she will ever know. I celebrate her heavenly transfer with her, knowing she is finally out of pain, worry, and disappointment in this life, and look forward to being reunited with her soon. Thank you, Roxanne, for being my friend. Rebecca Briley, Ph.D.
